Institution of Occupational Safety and Health (IOSH) Safety for Executives and Directors Course

The aim of the IOSH Safety for Executives and Directors course is to give a clear explanation of the principles of good business sense when it comes to managing health and safety in the workplace.

Why should I attend this course?

The aim of the IOSH Safety for Executives and Directors course is to give a clear explanation of the principles of good business sense when it comes to managing health and safety in the workplace.

Course Overview

The course is based on the occupational health and safety standards which are found in the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974, the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, and the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007.

Who is this course for?

The course is designed for individuals who have overall operational or strategic accountability for an organisation, responsible for determining and implementing effective health and safety management and monitoring its success.

The course lasts one day, from approximately 10 a.m.–4 p.m. The exact duration does depend on questions asked and concerns raised for discussion. The course is provided to clients usually on an in-house basis, however, it can be hosted at one of our offices should this be deemed more appropriate.

Course Content

- Describe the legal, moral and financial role of operational directors, owners of small businesses and senior executives, including their responsibilities, liabilities and accountabilities, both personal and organisational.
- Explain the importance of safety and health at top management level and how integrating those objectives into other business management objectives can help to minimise risk, reduce losses and make better use of time and resources.
- Illustrate how to plan the direction for safety and health through developing and implementing a safety and health policy, and integrating it into business systems.
- Explain the value of an adequately resourced and efficient safety and health management system, the value and benefits of training at all levels, and when to access competent advice.
- Outline the benefits of good safety and health management systems, the consequences of failing to manage effectively and how to ensure internal controls are working.
- Describe the importance of reviewing and continually improving management systems, especially following change or failure.
- Explain the positive impact and improvement that an organisation's leaders can have on its performance through their attitude and support for improving its safety culture.
- Describe the importance of setting key performance indicators and targets, together with performance monitoring and review for continual improvement in safety and health management.

Certification and Assessment

The course will finish with an end-of-course assessment and as the course has been approved by the Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (IOSH), all delegates who successfully complete this course are issued with IOSH certificates.
